Life

This is where microinsurance started. Credit life microinsurance was first developed to cover the loans of microfinance clients. Life microinsurance remains the most common type of microinsurance available, but has expanded beyond credit-linked products. Term-life and funeral insurance have reached scale. The growth is due to increased demand from consumers, and the involvement of distribution channels other than microfinance institutions, such as mobile network operators.

Show 246 items per resource